

Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law has been a very successful way of ending the numerous unwanted phone calls we received before the law was enacted. Allowing the CBA to undermine this law is not only wrong, it will send the message that citizens do not have the right to prevent harassment. Allowing the CBA request is like passing a law that citizens may not have screens on their doors and windows to keep out mosquitoes. The CBA are some of the mosquito-like pests we do not want pestering us in our houses.
